Security a part of today's lifestyle

Locks For All Reasons

Dan Perkins of Lloydminster Lock and Key displayed locks of all kinds and for all types of doors at last Wednesday's Security Seminar in Elk Point. Constable Fred Ridding of Elk Point RCMP gave his input on the effectiveness of various types of locks at keeping out intruders.

Protection of homes, business premises and rural property was the topic of a workshop held April 11 under the auspices of the Elk Point RCMP Detachment, Rural Crime Watch, Elk Point Surface Rights Association and security specialists from Lloydminster and Edmonton.

With the increase in both rural and urban crime, the onus is placed on the property owner to protect his or her belongings from theft and vandalism. The two and a half hour seminar gave a number of tips on how to do just that.

Dan Perkins of Lloydminster Lock and Key displayed a variety of locks for different applications, from unbreakable padlocks to digital entrance locks, and explained the features of each type. He also noted that his firm has hinges with non-removable pins to keep doors from being removed in that way. Included in his product line were locks for glass patio doors and a large cast device which locks over the hitch of a trailer to prevent it being pulled away.

Cst. Fred Ridding of Elk Point RCMP commented on the various locks and their success at preventing intruders from entering a premises. "If they have to work and work and work to get in, they may not bother to keep up the effort," he noted.

Terry Jenkins of Coast to Coast Security, Edmonton, says crime is "a constant problem. As in the pioneer days, you have to protect your family and your belongings." His method of doing this is through the use of alarm systems. "Security is very loud," he commented. A burglar breaking into a building equipped with a security device will usually leave when the siren sounds to warn that an intruder is on the premises. Many of the systems are also hooked up to the Edmonton office, which immediately notifies the RCMP in the community and the owner of the building. If lines are cut to prevent the victim from alerting police, the alarm is also sounded in Edmonton. Jenkins said one system in Elk Point got a message to the Edmonton office in 2.3 seconds, so RCMP could be notified of an intrusion in progress.

The security system Jenkins demonstrated included infrared motion detectors, which he said will also monitor heat changes, such as if a window is opened allowing cold air in, and even can detect body heat from such small intruders as a mouse. Displaying the keypad which controls the device, he told the audience the system is "designed for the average person to run, with just four numbers to get in and four to get out."

Residentially, he said, "the most important thing is you and your family." Perimeter protection, which indicates any person trying to enter a premises, protects your home both when you are at home and when you are away. The perimeter protection also is the best for the owners of pets, especially cats, which tend to set off the motion detectors even if these are set a distance above the floor to allow a "pet alley," since cats jump up on furniture and dogs generally do not.

Darlene Pinder, also of Coast to Coast, noted that a system owner does not need to fear punching in the wrong code and having the RCMP instantly appear to apprehend them. "You just punch in the correct code right away, and that will cancel the first one." Cst. Ridding added, "Don't worry about false alarms, just call and let us know."

The systems can also be hooked up to smoke detectors, and will sound the alarm if temperature in a building drops below a preset level, such as in the case of a power failure or furnace problems. A set of buttons on the keypad is preset to call the fire department, ambulance or police

Dewberry fiddler wins Search for Talent

By Diane Bellerive
Staff Writer

The Orange Blossom Special came to life Friday, as Kyle Jones from Dewberry played the fiddle, winning first in the Two Hills Search for Talent program held at the Two Hills Centennial Hall.

The Ojibway Jingle dancers, Patsy Anderson and Cathy Stone from Saddle Lake, with their colorful costumes with hundreds of bells were attached, danced in unison quickly picking up second place in the youth category. Twenty-six people participated in the competition in the three different categories, winning prizes but only the two winners of the Youth category will continue on in the competitions.

Hosted by the Two Hills Swimming Pool Club, the Klondike Days Youth Talent Quest is sponsored by CFCW Radio and Edmonton Northlands. The two winners in the youth group, Kyle Jones and the Ojibway Jingle Dancers from Saddle Lake, will attend the 5th annual Klondike Days Youth Talent Quest on July 23 to 28 in Edmonton. If they succeed in winning in Edmonton, they will win $500 and an all-expense paid trip to the Mid-South Fair in Memphis Tennessee to compete in the Youth Talent International. The grand award winner in Memphis will receive an audition with CBS Television plus $5,000 cash.

Winners in the child category, were Carlene Soprovich, with her ethnic dance and second, 10-year-old, Melissa Fedoruk with her song, "Lost in your eyes."

In the adult category, Cheryl Chrapko won first with the songs, "You were always on my mind," and "Under the boardwalk." Hyliene Verenka came in second in the adult category with "My last cigarette," and "May the circle be unbroken."

First place winners received $50, and second place winners received $25.

The talent show attended by approximately 300 people, displayed a large amount of truly talented people within the community. All were winners.

Young Virtuoso

Kyle Jones, a member of Dewberry's "Borderline Buddies" band, wowed the judges at the Two Hills Search for Talent with his prowess on the violin, as he performed the old bluegrass favorite, "Orange Blossom Special" for a crowd nearing 300 people in the Two Hills Centennial Hall.

if the occupant of the building requires instant assistance in an emergency.

Security systems also have outdoor applications, and can monitor farmyards, industrial compounds, etc., with a range of up to 1000 feet. They can be hooked up to video cameras with a time lapse recorder which indicates the time the picture was taken. They can also monitor internal theft by keeping a record of who entered and exited the building and when.

"They do work," Cst. Ridding said, noting that one business owner in this area has had three break and entries foiled since he purchased a unit.

A coffee break, sponsored by Norcen Energy Resources, gave those in attendance at the seminar ample time to talk with the company representatives about locks and security systems for their particular needs.

Alban Bugej of the Elk Point Surface Rights Association brought greetings to the new Rural Crime Watch, and said he is particularly pleased that it is part of the Greater Lakeland Rural Crime Watch, which has "a proven record of success," having won the Solicitor General's award for rural crime watches last year. He said that both the EPSRA and Rural Crime Watch are concerned with the protection of rural property, one protecting the legal rights of the owner of the property and one protecting the property itself.

Bugej added that the objectives of the two organizations are the same in the area of trespassing and access. Half of the resolutions approved at the Federation of Surface Rights Associations Annual Meeting dealt with access and trespassing problems throughout the province.

Those who attended a recent information night hosted by the EPSRA were made aware of the frustrations of law enforcement agencies regarding the difficulties in obtaining convictions in rural crime, Bugej said. He suggested that trespassers be fined "similar to traffic speeders," and said if the fines were high enough, they might deter those with a criminal intent.

Bugej also called for "simpler legislation that doesn't create confusion" in the way the present legislation does, that would be easily understood and easily enforced. "The next step is to get the Province to see it that way."

Steve Kohl, President of the Greater Lakeland Crime Watch, spoke briefly, and commented that "farmers travel almost as much as truck drivers—they make good eyes and ears for the RCMP."

Cst. Paul Ariss of the St. Paul RCMP is the liaison officer for the Greater Lakeland Rural Crime Watch, and has been involved with Rural Crime Watch since the program was first developed in 1978 in Bassano. "There aren't enough police around to keep an eye on everything," he stated. "The whole program is so that if you see something unusual, you report it to the police. If you can see a licence plate, give them the number." The program was originally called Range Patrol, Ariss said, and "it worked then and it works now. I've seen the results." Ariss encouraged everyone to get involved. "It protects you and your neighbors—but it only works if everyone takes part."

Gordon McCuaig, the Zone 13 representative to the Greater Lakeland Rural Crime Watch, noted that the Oil Patch Watch with which he has been involved for some time, found it useful to mark all equipment and tools with an identifying mark, to aid in recovery of stolen property. Cst. Ridding told the gathering that the Detachment has equipment to do this, and invited participants to sign it out and mark their property. He also noted that businesses can be assigned special numbers to mark on their merchandise for ease of identification after a theft.

Cst. Al Stockley, also of the Elk Point RCMP said that small hand tools, grain and fuel are the most often stolen items in the rural area. He urged those present to write down the licence number of strangers who come into their yard asking for directions or selling things, in case they are actually there to see where fuel tanks, etc., are for later pilfering. He also suggested that farmers keep track of the serial numbers of farm chemicals, in case of theft.

Security System Demonstrated

Terry Jenkins of Coast to Coast Security, Edmonton, demonstrates a keypad-operated security system which monitors motion and temperature changes to detect break-ins and other property threatening situations in home or business.

Gifts For Skating Coaches

Jackie Whiffen-Peters, Callie Baumgardner, LeeAnn Wozniak and Christina Estey were presented with gifts of appreciation for a year of dedicated effort at the Elk Point Skating Club's windup afternoon. The Club extended thanks and appreciation to Mrs. Whiffen-Peters and Mrs. Wozniak for their coaching throughout the year, and congratulated Miss Baumgardner and Miss Estey on the completion of their first formal year as amateur coaches.

Cheerful messages

Elk Point's newest business offers something different in the way of a greeting for those special occasions in life, be it a new arrival in the family, a birthday for young or old, or possibly a stag party preceding an upcoming wedding.

Brenda Patroch's brainchild, "Cheers!!" will fill a lawn with brilliant pink flamingoes, send a clown to deliver a decorated cookie-gram, or have a clown on hand to entertain at a child's birthday party. In the future, the new business woman plans to add a giant stork with a blackboard suspended from his beak, for announcing a new baby, Easter bunnies and Santa Claus to give holiday parties a special touch, and maybe even penguins to dress up your wedding day with their spotless tuxedos.

Operation of the new business is just getting underway, and to introduce her new and unique services to Elk Point, Ms Patroch is offering a $ 10 discount on bookings made before May 15. Deposits will be required with each booking, and the convenience of Visa will soon be available, Ms Patroch says.

In Our View

Earth Day

Take a look at the world around you. Snowbanks are receding swiftly in the warm spring sunshine, grass is turning green, buds are getting fatter daily. Ducks swim on every slough, geese are winging north, crows and starlings are busy at their annual arguments over territorial rights. A brief spring shower freshens the air. Meadow larks rejoice in the promise of spring, and furry catkins crown every willow.

Scary, isn't it?

This is not a new concept. Rachel Carson told our parents' generation about it many years ago in her book, "Silent Spring." But they, and we who followed after, all said, and say, "That can't really happen." Want to bet? Scientists today assure us that it can, and will. If we don't change our ways very soon, it could happen far sooner than we think.

Sunday, April 22 is Earth Day. One small day, one - three hundred sixty fifth of a year, is of course not enough to save the planet. But the awareness we learn on that day, from the events which are taking place across the land, can help to avert the tragedy that could befall us all. Recycling, reusing, composting, conserving...all these will help. Awareness of the problems, and making others, including our politicians, aware of them, will help also. Picking up one pop can, taking one bag of newspapers to the recycle bin instead of the dump, planting one tree, making a move to non-disposable diapers...all these are small steps, but many small steps can get you up a mountain.

But will it always be so?

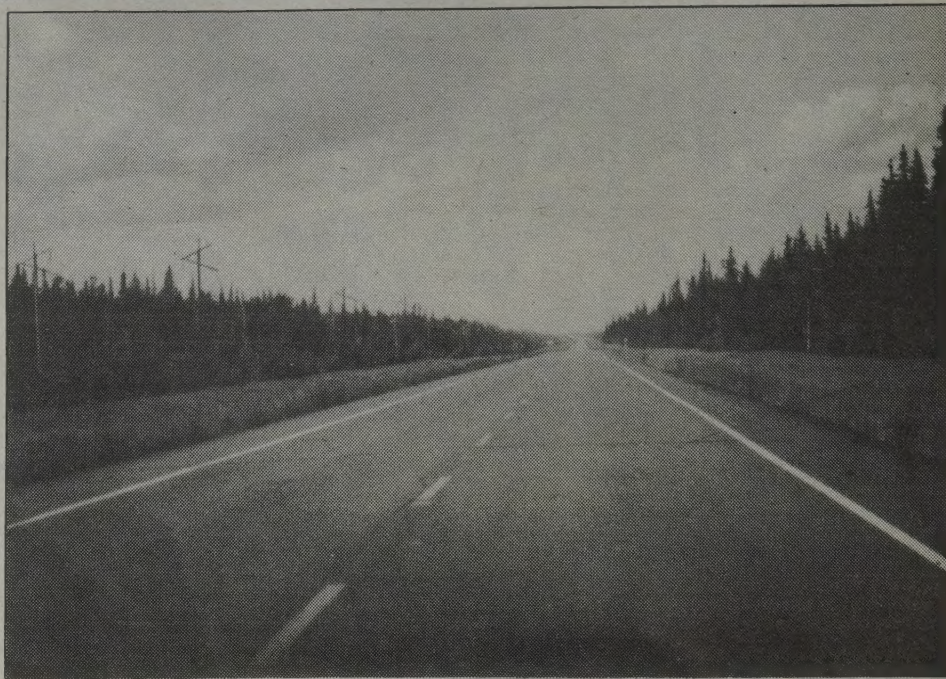

Ever increasing population, creating massive pollution through their lifestyles and their industrial practices, may sometime take away this glorious season we take for granted. Emissions and toxic waste could put an end to the song and flight of our feathered friends, and turn our babbling brooks and racing rivers into stinking cesspools. The growing hole in the ozone layer could eventually change our climate so we could not tell one season from another, with the world growing hotter and drier until it is little but a parched

Earth—it's all we have. Make sure you do your bit to protect it, Sunday and every day.

Praise to thee,
my Lord, for all thy creatures.

—St. Francis of Assisi

High Lines and Highway

The lines we see following our highways today are probably all power lines; in years past we often saw two lines — one was telephone. These carried the glass insulators, so loved then slingshot targets, by school kids, while many fell to the .22, carried by older 'kids', when they didn't find enough prairie chickens to suit them.

Those connecting lines

By Irene Magnusson

Probably most of you who bother to read my little offering each week feel I have a limitless supply of words, and ideas; or perhaps you agree with the 'words' part, but not so much the 'ideas.' Mostly, I have plenty of ideas, whether good or bad, thoughts I want to share, and of course, I always want to please you, so you will continue to read...Sometimes, ideas are scarce.

Searching the tangled thoughts I like to call my mind this morning, I am recalling the conversation with my brother the other night. It being his birthday on the morrow, I picked up the phone and dialed his number. After a couple of rings, his voice came over the wire, as though he were in the room with me, and we exchanged the usual news and views families engage in, using, once again, the miracle of science and technology we have become so used to, and accept so for granted.

In the past week or two, I have conversed with persons in Kansas, Sointula, Manotick, Fruitvale, Fairview, Edmonton, Vancouver; shall I go on? Probably you have done the same. The ease with which we throw our voices, speak our thoughts, ask our questions, over these countless miles is utterly astonishing, yet we rarely give it a thought.

Before the telephone, there was a system of communication, the telegraph, invented by Samuel F.B. Morse (using the Morse Code, naturally), back in 1850 or thereabouts, but it was a dot-dash signal, which transmitted words and numbers; messages, yes, but not the human voice. Letters traveled around the country and around the world, carrying their messages to families, friends, enemies, and the news, but again, not the human voice.

In 1876 and 1877, Alexander Graham Bell patented a device he had been working on, whereby the human voice could be carried over a distance. I cannot begin to understand the exact workings, but my book here says a telephone is a carbon microphone, the transmitter contains loosely packed carbon grains. When someone speaks into the telephone, the diaphragm vibrates, causing the carbon grains to be compressed and released. This motion varies the flow of electric current, which is then sent on down the wire, to the distant receiver, which shakes and vibrates in unison, causing the sounds sent off to come out as the same voice that sent them.

All of which is very complicated and (do not follow my instructions and attempt to build your own telephone!) scientific. Modern telephones make use of other impulses, and equipment, including fiber optics (glass fibers), and probably includes radio microwaves. Perhaps our innocent family visits over the phone go off into outer space, before being reassembled into ordinary sound waves, which, at our bidding, become prosaic messages such as "How's the weather out your way?", "The kids are fine.", "Is your snow all gone yet?", and "When are you going to arrive for that visit you promised?"

Long ago when the land out here was being homesteaded, de-treed and de-rocked, the pioneers were known to rig up a 'barbed wire telephone.' Don't ask me how they did it, and I never saw or heard one, but I've been told that they worked. Since the farms were fenced with barbed wire, they just had to rig up tall poles at the corners, to carry a connecting wire over the road, and they were in business.

Where they got the earphones and speakers, I don't know. I have heard they cranked a bell, to call the listener to the phone. Also that anyone and everyone could hear what was said, even could join in the conversation: very much a "party line." It must have made for some interesting rows, wild gossip, and cats-let-out-of-the-bag on occasion.

The party line has continued to this day, in some parts of our fair land, although the telephone companies are working toward individual lines, as rapidly as time and finances allow.

We take this service so for granted, most of the time. Oh, I know we are far ahead of the 'speaking wires', what with radio transmission, television, satellite rebounds, what have you. I still think the good old telephone is one of our major blessings, one of our most resounding discoveries of all time. We probably could not live without it, now.

Mostly, we don't have to. For the services rendered, the cost is quite low. Besides being turned into nervous wrecks from all the writing, if we exchanged all the words, on paper, that we exchange via the telephone, and waited around for the answers, then counted up the paper and stamps, well, I think we'd just quit communicating by a very large percentage.

So here I am, sitting around waiting for spring to strike again. Meanwhile, I know that my brother's plant has a new contract, off in Wichita, that the renovations are coming fine in Fairview, that the sap is running in Pointe Claire, the fishing boat is getting a spring spruce-up on Malcolm Island, and my great-grandson in Surrey is doing fine. Among other things I wouldn't be aware of, without the long, thin wires. And now, an invitation to supper has been spoken in my left ear, over only a few miles. So I say, yes, thanks, and now, I'd better get ready.

Letter to the Editor

Thanks to Minor hockey

I would like to thank all the Moms and Dads and all the hockey players for their very kind appreciation plaque they thought I deserved. I will cherish that forever. I love you all. I thank you kindly.

Further Ed welcomes members

New members Cathy Lindquist, Alvina Schuhmacher and Ray Danyluk were welcomed to the Elk Point and District Further Education Council at that group's April meeting.

Environmental concerns are much in the forefront at the present time, and the Council was asked to take part in the current campaign by the Lioness Club to build a number of paper collection boxes. Although Further Ed does not generally sponsor projects of this sort, it was decided that the need for a clean and conserving environment is sufficient to warrant participation in this undertaking. The Council will sponsor a box and will call it their "Project Environment".

Policy and Procedures Guidelines are under development and will be presented at the Council's June meeting.

Dave Scott of Lakeland College explained how Lakeland organizes courses, and how they could offer courses through Further Education. No decision was made regarding this step, which will be discussed again at the next meeting.

Plans for fall and winter courses are already underway. The Council hopes to offer over 80 courses in Elk Point, Heinsburg and Fishing Lake next season, and would like suggestions from both Council members and the general public on what courses should be held.

Shopping Spree Contestant

Grayson Bilak was this week's winner of the Elk Point Co-op draw for the Kiddies' Shopping Spree, which will be coming up on April 28, with six preschoolers taking part.

New members at meeting

Two concepts for the Visitor Reception Centre to be constructed later this year at the Fort George-Buckingham House Historic Site were displayed by Past President Frank Mayner at last week's meeting of the Elk Point Historical Society, and were eagerly viewed by the good number of old and new members in attendance. One concept was long and narrow, spanning a small ravine, but this did not draw much enthusiasm from those present, who preferred instead a multi sided and more conventional type of structure, which will provide washrooms, food and gift sale areas in addition to a large display area.

Gail Kozicky reported briefly on a symposium on cultural tourism she had attended, and suggested that the project "must be sold to the community first, then the tourists will come."

The Society's involvement in Canada Day celebrations was discussed. New designs for the group's float were considered, as was the possibility of taking the float to other communities for their parades. The Historical Society will again have a map-style guest book, and will have a booth selling pins and other souvenirs.

A revamped version of the Mural Park Agreement was discussed at length, but was eventually approved, and will be presented at Town Council's April 17 meeting. The much shortened, one page version, was the result of a "short and successful meeting" between Town Councillor Adele Mandryk, Sheila Thompson, Frank Mayner and himself, President Larry Demchuk reported.

To introduce the society and its projects to the public, the group decided to host a Historical Society Awareness Night at the Library on Wednesday, May 16, during National Tourism Awareness Week. A committee was set up to plan the event.

ACA Regional meets in Athabasca region

By Irene Magnusson

Newly installed Chairman, Paul Poty, of the Alberta Council on Aging, (ACA), Region 2, conducted his first meeting with the Board on April 11th, 1990, in the Seniors' Centre in Athabasca. This building, itself, is unique in that it is the renovated Railway Station, nestling under the tall grain elevator buildings.

Representatives of eight Areas were present, eventually, although the vehicle of the secretary and treasurer was delayed by a flat tire. Fortunately, no injury resulted, and the meeting proceeded as scheduled. Chairman Poty reiterated that reports from Area Board members henceforth must be in writing. Information on the re-designating of the Areas was brought by Sid Holthe, Advisory personnel, and after study of the maps, the Region was re-divided, and will now comprise 7 Areas, instead of 9. Fort McMurray has decided to opt out, as the distance is so great, and the other Areas were fitted more closely to coincide with the Seniors Centres.

Information on the roles of the Area Directors was brought forth, encouraging them to work more closely with the Seniors Groups in their areas. They will also be expected to canvass for funds, as there is no longer a membership fee. These funds are to cover expenses of travel to meetings, as well as other costs.

More publicity, regarding the role of ACA in the Areas, was recommended, with contacts with Seniors groups, and use of newspapers as suggestions.

Paul Poty has been nominated to serve on the provincial ACA Board; this has not been decided yet.

The July meeting will be in Ashmont, Area 4, Director is Leo Gratton. This will be July 11. Speakers and Program not yet confirmed.

Pins depicting the same view as the Seniors' Pioneer Banner were shown. These will be available later in the season, and for the Seniors' Summer Games at Hinton. Several Board members will be attending the Conference in Red Deer in late May. Reports will be expected.

ports will be expected.

New Horizon Representative, Denis Moreau, came in and introduced himself, but did not address the group.

Ladies of the Seniors Centre served a delicious meal, at noon. The day was delightful, sunny and mild, making the long distance seem shorter. A definite bonus was seeing deer along the way, as we drove home in the late afternoon.

Ruthless Writers visit Vermilion Guild

Alberta Author

Myrna Kostash addressed the Vermilion Writers Guild at Lakeland College on March 24, with a number of Elk Point's Ruthless Writers in attendance.

By Irene Magnusson

When the Ruthless Writers Group at Elk Point received an invitation to attend the Writers Guild at the Lakeland College in Vermilion on March 24th, we were all gung ho to participate - and even hoped we would not be "Ruth"-less, for we had all enjoyed the few weeks our Ruth had been able to spend near us, as she visited her father, in Elk Point.

However, she had just finished the script she was presently preparing for the film to be made based on her successful radio drama, aired last winter, and for her, the time had come to leave the old home base and head back to her house in Winnipeg. So, again, we are 'Ruthless' - not mean, just Ruthless.

Five of us drove down to Vermilion, our eyes and ears wide open, to see and hear all we could, in hopes of it being beneficial to our writing careers. Several of our group were not able to attend. Probably one of the chief drawing cards was an opportunity to meet and speak with Myrna Kostash, author of two books, and long-time contributor to Chatelaine Magazine, and who is presently President of the Writers Guild of Alberta. Recently shown, in our Film Festival at the Elk Point Library a few weeks ago, was one of Myrna Kostash's films, "Teach Me To Dance," and while this film was made some years ago, the message it teaches is still apt today.

Other authors we spoke to were Darlene Barrie Quaife, whose recent hard-cover book, "Bone Bird," has a locale set in the forests of northern Vancouver Island, and deals with the clear-cut and other drastic reduction of the forests of our land. Sharon Stredwick, columnist for the Vermilion Standard, was present, as was Dave Poulsen, sometimes writer-in-residence at Vermilion (presently conducting classes periodically for the Writers group at Killam) - along with some twenty-five or thirty others, some of whom were staff members at the College.

Many were not writers, themselves, but are interested in the works of others. A couple of lively and humorous poems were read by a reporter from the Mannville Reflections (I didn't get his name). We were welcomed by staff members.

Myrna Kostash then offered information on the goals and accomplishments of the Writers Guild of Alberta, which maintains its head office in Edmonton. Second largest in Canada, the Guild boasts a membership of over 800, offers many writers' services, as well as a Newsletter. Lists of publishers, information on workshops, manuscript reading services all these and more are yours when you join the group, certainly a big help to anyone trying to make it in the writing field.

Books by various authors were on display, in the semicircular meeting and lunch room at the College, while a delicious variety of cheeses and fruits, etc., were offered for our taste buds. It wasn't possible to speak with everyone, but we tried, and came home with the feeling of well-being which comes from communicating with others whose interests are similar to our own.

Easter at the library

By Irene Magnusson

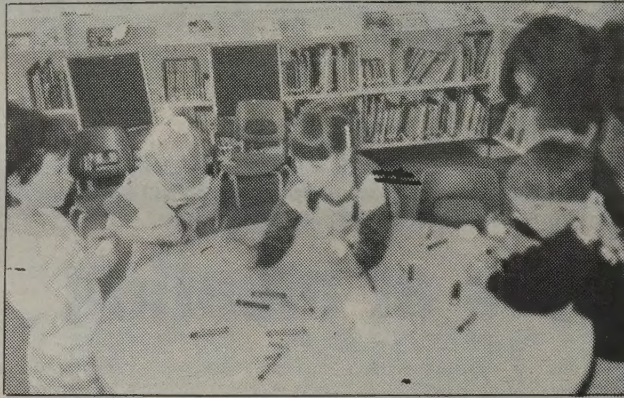

The Elk Point Public Library staff lent their efforts to providing a program of Easter fun for 3-to-6-year olds, plus a number of parents, on Friday, April 6, commencing at 10:30 a.m.

Three readers took part in the program, with a total of thirty-two youngsters on hand, some too tiny to leave their mother's arms or carriers, and a goodly number of parents too. Diane Courtier started the reading, all about the Easter Bunny and his antics.

Diane Fraess took over, with more Easter tales, including dressing up in the Easter Bonnet. Doreen Mayner then carried the narration while a number of little bunnies and other creatures made an appearance in the puppet box theatre, having to do with a chocolate Easter egg. The children, all sweetly dressed in their Easter-at-the-Library best, were as excited about the puppets as they were a few minutes later when Mrs. Mayner announced an Easter egg hunt. After a successful forage through the library's rows of shelves and book racks, juice was served and coffee for the mothers. Eggs (boiled, I hope!) were handed out to the youngsters, with coloring materials, and everyone had a chance to decorate an Easter egg.

Lena Stepa, working that day as Librarian, said a children's reading was held every Friday morning at the library, to which almost as many children attended weekly. The surroundings are very pleasant, including miniature furniture to fit the little bodies. Talking books, and coloring materials add to the children's fun.

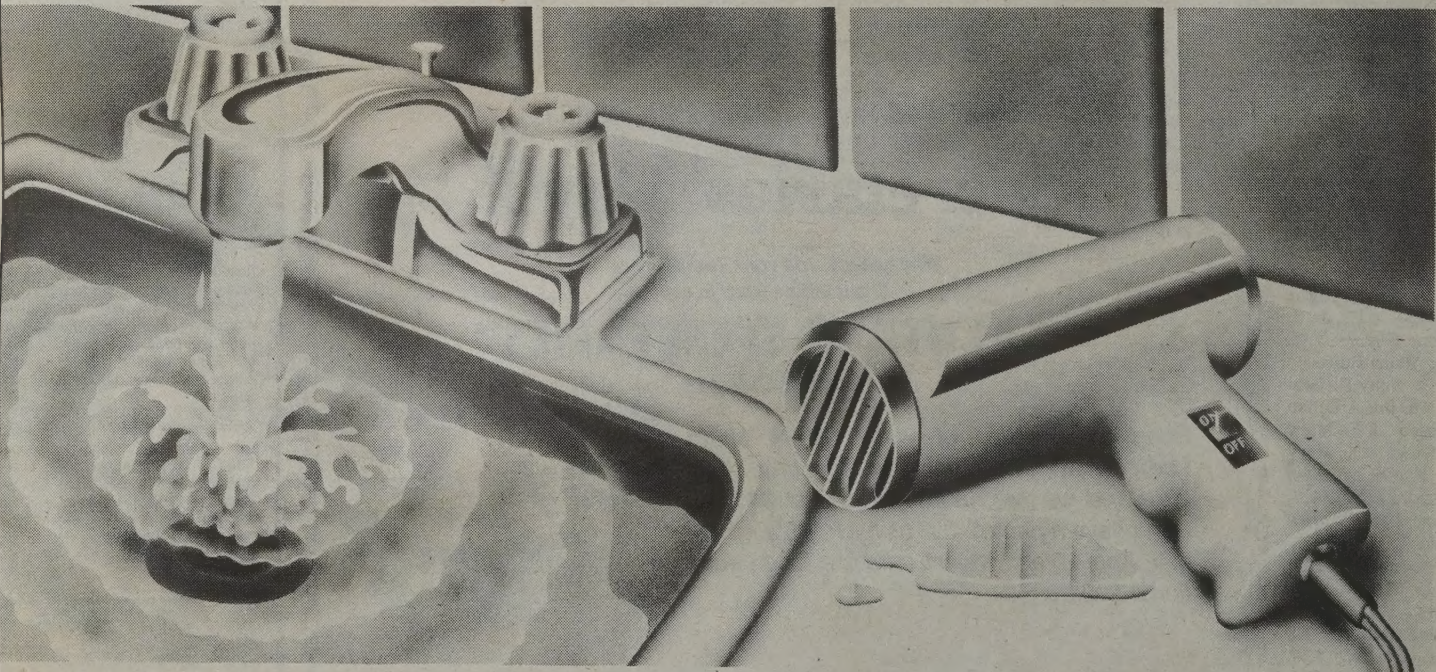

Easter Egg Art

Little artists at Elk Point Public Library decorated hard boiled eggs at their special Easter storytime. A puppet show, egg hunt and seasonal stories completed the morning's activities.

Keep hair-raising experiences out of the bathroom.

A plugged-in hair dryer and a sink full of water is a deadly combination.

Electrical appliances and water just don't mix. Whether it's in the bathroom, kitchen or the laundry room, keep small

Daffodils for Cancer

By Irene Magnusson

Saturday, April 7, was Daffodil Day in Elk Point, with Brenda Patroch dispensing the golden flowers of Spring, on behalf of the Canadian Cancer Society. And a bright and cheerful spot it made, with the armfuls of yellow blooms, ready to say "Springtime!" and "Happy Easter!" in exchange for a donation to the Cancer Fund. The Elk Point Co-op Store donated the space.

Brenda Patroch is the person behind Daffodil Day in Elk Point. She has been working for this very important cause for four years now. A canvas is done through the area, as well, as much as the limited number of canvassers can cover, in April, with proceeds going to help cancer sufferers. They also have collection containers in some of the businesses around town.

Almost all of the large shipment of Daffodils went out, with a few remainders delivered to the Hospital and Heritage Lodge. Returns are not great, Brenda says, as no set price is asked, rather the flowers are given in exchange for a donation. The flowers cost around 20 cents each, delivered from the fields of B.C.

A whopping 89% of all donation goes to Cancer Research, with a mere 11% going to administration, a very good record. Cancer is a problem almost certain to hit every family, sooner or later, and we should all give as generously as we can. Memorial donations are welcome and cheerfully arranged by Brenda Patroch, whom you may call at her home, 724-3080, any weekday, business hours. An attractive card is available.

Brenda thanks all who donated, or will donate, and especially the canvassers, who give so generously of their time. Do welcome them when they drop in at your house.

Daffodil Days

Daffodils are one of the first flowers of spring, and while these early ones will come from Vancouver Island, we can look forward to having them in our own gardens, if we get bulbs established.

Exceptional youths sought for awards

I. Magnusson

ELK POINT - Do you know a young person who befriends the lonely, helps the elderly and disabled, or who contributes to the community in a special way?

These young people deserve to be rewarded for enhancing the lives of others through their cheerful enthusiasm and selfless contributions. You can help recognize these caring individuals by nominating them for an Alberta Junior Citizen of the Year Award.

Sponsored by Alberta Power Limited and TransAlta Utilities in cooperation with the Alberta Weekly Newspapers Association, the award acknowledges the unique contributions of young people throughout Alberta. Ten awards are presented annually.

If you know a special young person or group of young people between the ages of six and 18 who deserve to be honored for their community service, enthusiasm and caring attitude, please nominate them for an Alberta Junior Citizen of the Year Award.

At a special luncheon in their honor in September, recipients of the award receive a framed citation presented by the Lieutenant-Governor of Alberta, a cash award and an exclusive lapel pin.

Since its inception in the early 1960s, the Alberta Junior Citizen of the Year Award has been received by more than 300 young Albertans. Hundreds of nominations are received each year.

May 31, 1990 is the deadline for nominations. Nomination forms can be picked up at the Lakeland Review office or at your local Alberta Power office.

Ten special youths or youth groups will receive 1990 Alberta Junior Citizen of the Year awards for making their communities a better place to live. Alberta Power Limited, Trans-Alta Utilities, and the Alberta Weekly Newspapers Association

April 10, 1990, was the chosen day for the Seniors' group in Elk Point, the Pioneer Circle, to hold their Annual meeting. With fifty-plus persons in attendance, the hall seemed quite full.

Nominated to Chair the meeting, Margaret Clark opened proceedings with minutes of the 1989 Annual Meeting, read by the recording secretary of the day. A detailed Financial report was circulated and read by treasurer Olga Ruzyski; this report was audited by Walter Saranchuk. A report of the Monday night Bingos was also offered. It was agreed these have done quite well for the group.

President for the past three years, Mike Palinka gave his report and received thanks for his work well done. Thanks were also offered to Phyllis Zarowny, who promotes the Monday bingos, and to Sid Holthe who has helped in many ways, especially with by-laws and interpretations of regulations, etc.

Reports from the various committees were heard; housekeeping, phoning, bingos, floor-curling, lunch, entertainment and the building committee. Most went very smoothly, but the problem of how to acquire a new building for the group's purposes still poses many questions.

The new executive for the coming year was selected, with two elections required. Others were by acclamation and volunteers. The new executive for the coming year is as follows: Chairman - Morris Cooper; 1st Vice-Chairman - Dan Demchuk; 2nd Vice-Chairman - Anne Buck; Secretary - Grace Barwick; Treasurer - Olga Ruzyski; Housekeeping - Doris Capjak; Sports Director - Mike Palinka; Entertainment - Violet McFayden; Steering Committee (Bldg.) to remain 'as is.'

Other committees - Lunch and Phoning - will take volunteers' names and call as needed.

The Board of Directors comprises: Paul Dacyk, Vera Romanchuk, Lena Step, Iryne Buck, Orville Swedgen, Anne Polinchuk, Mike Stuparyk, Li-

lian Palinka, Muriel Holthe, Margaret Clark, Frank Moneta, Minnie Moneta, Jean Dacyk, Mary Prusak, Fred Lorensen, Lena Kuziw and Ray Hammond

Sid Holthe suggested a Nominating Committee be struck before the next Annual Meeting, as this would move proceedings more smoothly. Coffee and cake were graciously served by some of the members, after the meeting adjourned, and all furniture was returned to place, ready for the following day's Bingo. A meeting of the new Board will be held Tuesday, May 8, at 2 p.m.
